composition: brass, glass

reference: The first of the lamps designed by Jan Garncarek. It refers to white weapons. Weapons were always present in the designer's family home. The designer was inspired by a story from his childhood when he was staying at his grandfather's house. Late one evening, the phone rang at home. It turned out that a burglar alarm had gone off at the neighbour's house, which automatically made such calls. Jan Garncarek's grandfather then took out a flute (a sword) and went to deal with the burglar. However, he escaped. The lamp is supposed to relate to a spear with which one could defend oneself in case of need. In fact, the elongated part of the lamp is not so easily removable, serving more as a symbol.
